You are a reflection of everything you have come in contact with since the moment you were born.

There was a child went forth every day;
And the first object he looked upon, that object
he became;
And that object became part of him for the day, or a certain part of the day, or for many years, or stretching cycles of years.
—Walt Whitman

Environments are invisible. Their groundrules, pervasive structure, and overall patterns elude easy perception.

—Marshall McLuhan

Your home and family are the first to affect your way of life. When you start school, new influences and images bombard you. Then, just as you are growing accustomed to these forces and are set in your mold, you enter a new sphere of influence. You must leave the sheltered academic life to experience a part of the real world.

When I was a child, I spoke like a child, I thought like a child, I reasoned like a child; when I became a man I gave up childish ways. For now we see in a mirror dimly, but then face to face. Now I know in part; then I shall understand fully, even as I have been fully understood.
—1 Corinthians 13: 11-12

Throughout your life you encounter many people whose reflections on you leave a lasting impression.

Faces of friendship, precision, caution, suavity, ideality;
The spiritual, prescient face—the always welcome, common benevolent face;

The face of the singing of music—the grand faces of natural lawyers and judges, broad at the back-top;

The pure, extravagant, yearning, questioning artist's face;

The ugly face of some beautiful soul; the handsome detested or despised face;

The face of an amour, the face of veneration;

The face of an immobile rock, the face as of a dream.

—Walt Whitman

Many people look my way,
And many pass me by;
In moments of reflection
I wonder why.

To the sad ones I'm unhappy,
To the losers I'm a fool;
To the students I'm a teacher,
With the teachers I'm in school.

The general sees a number,
A politician's tool;
To my friends I'm just an equal
In this world.

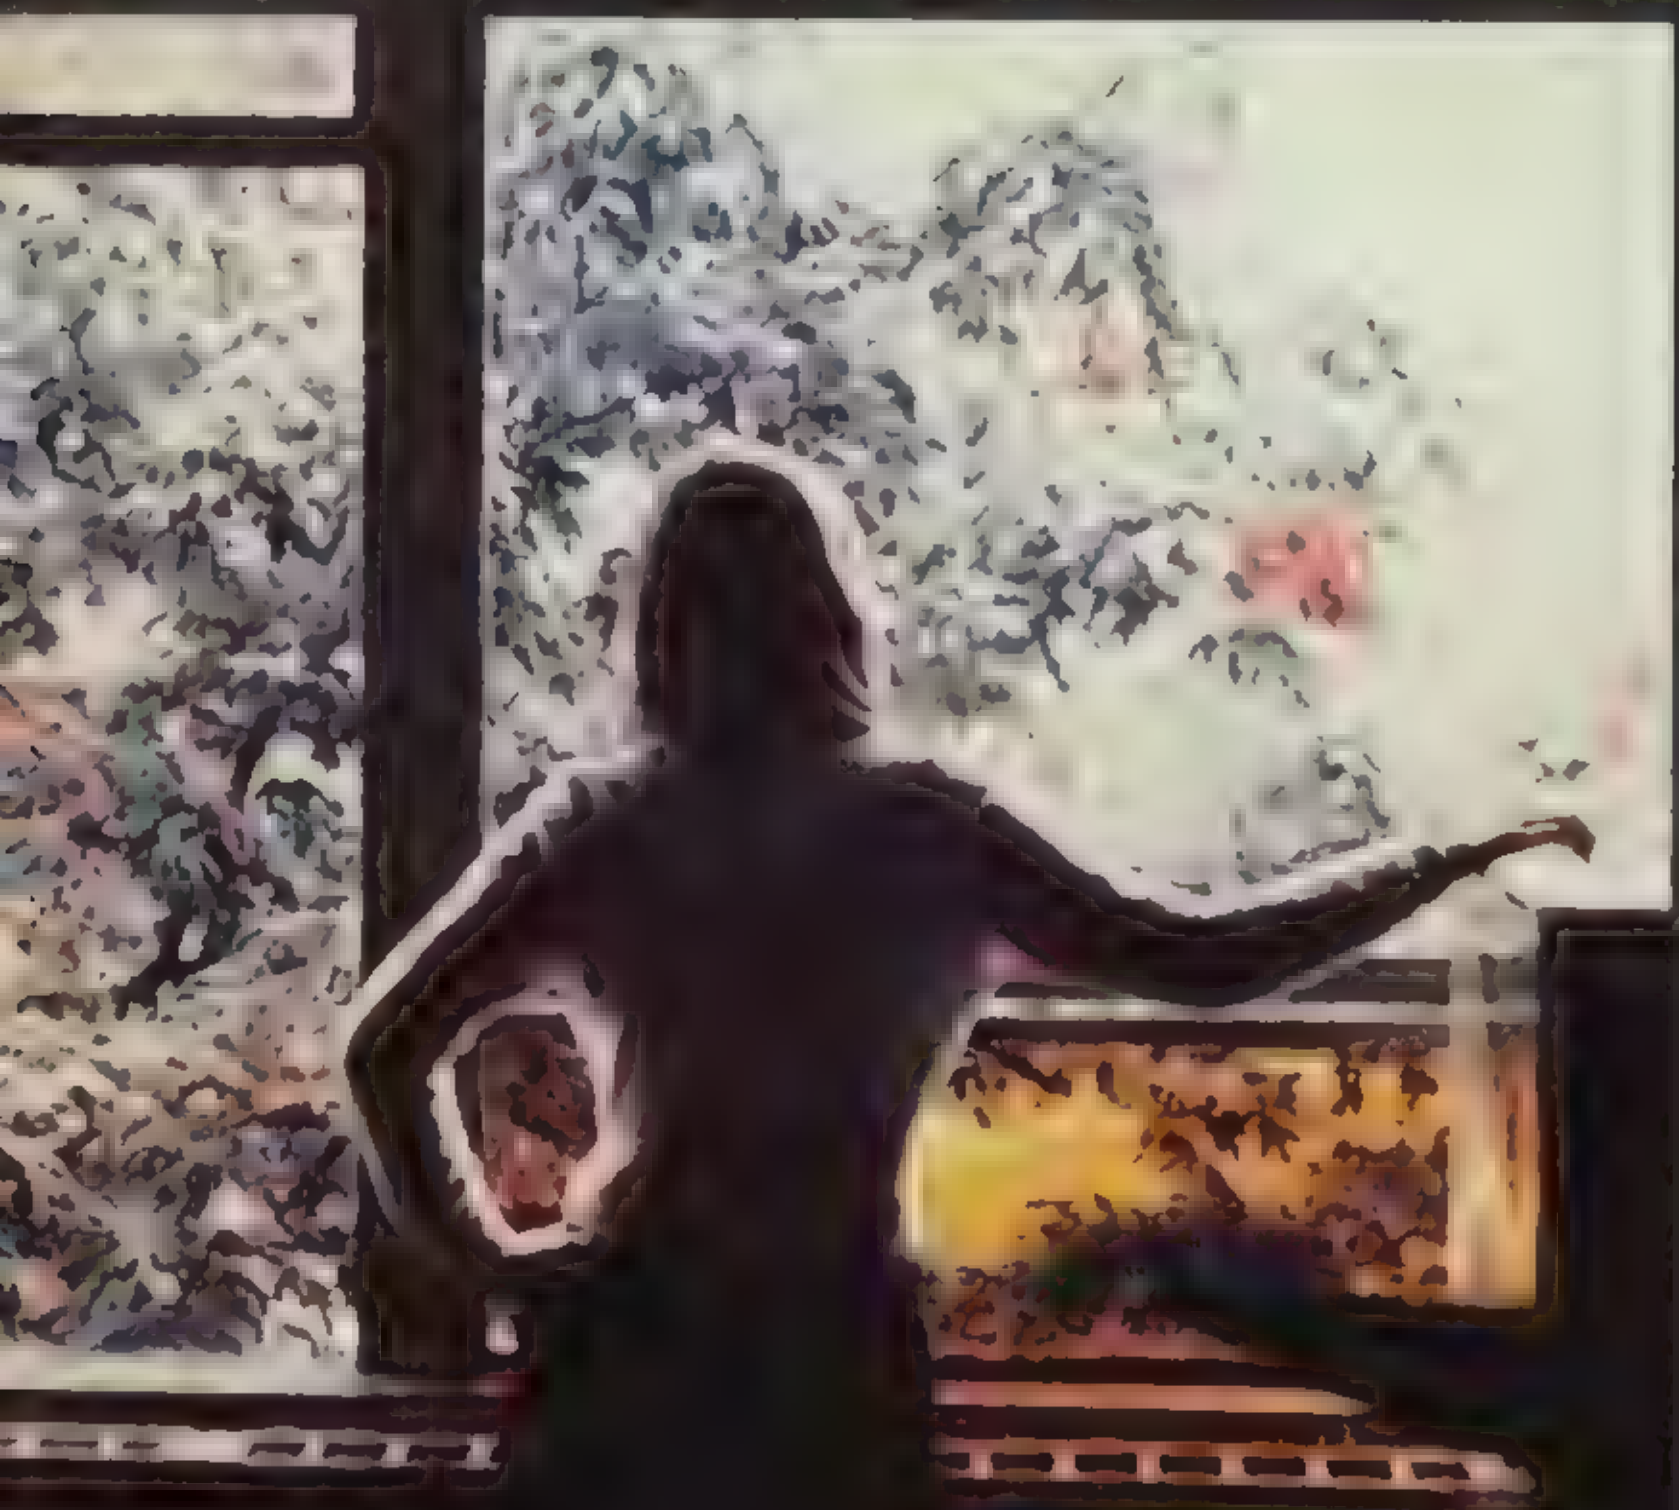

And the sellers think I'm merchandise,
They'll have me for a song;
The left ones think I'm right,
The right ones think I'm wrong.

Magic Mirror, won't you tell me please,
Do I see myself in anyone I meet?
Magic Mirror, if we only could,
Try and see ourselves as others would.

—Leon Russell

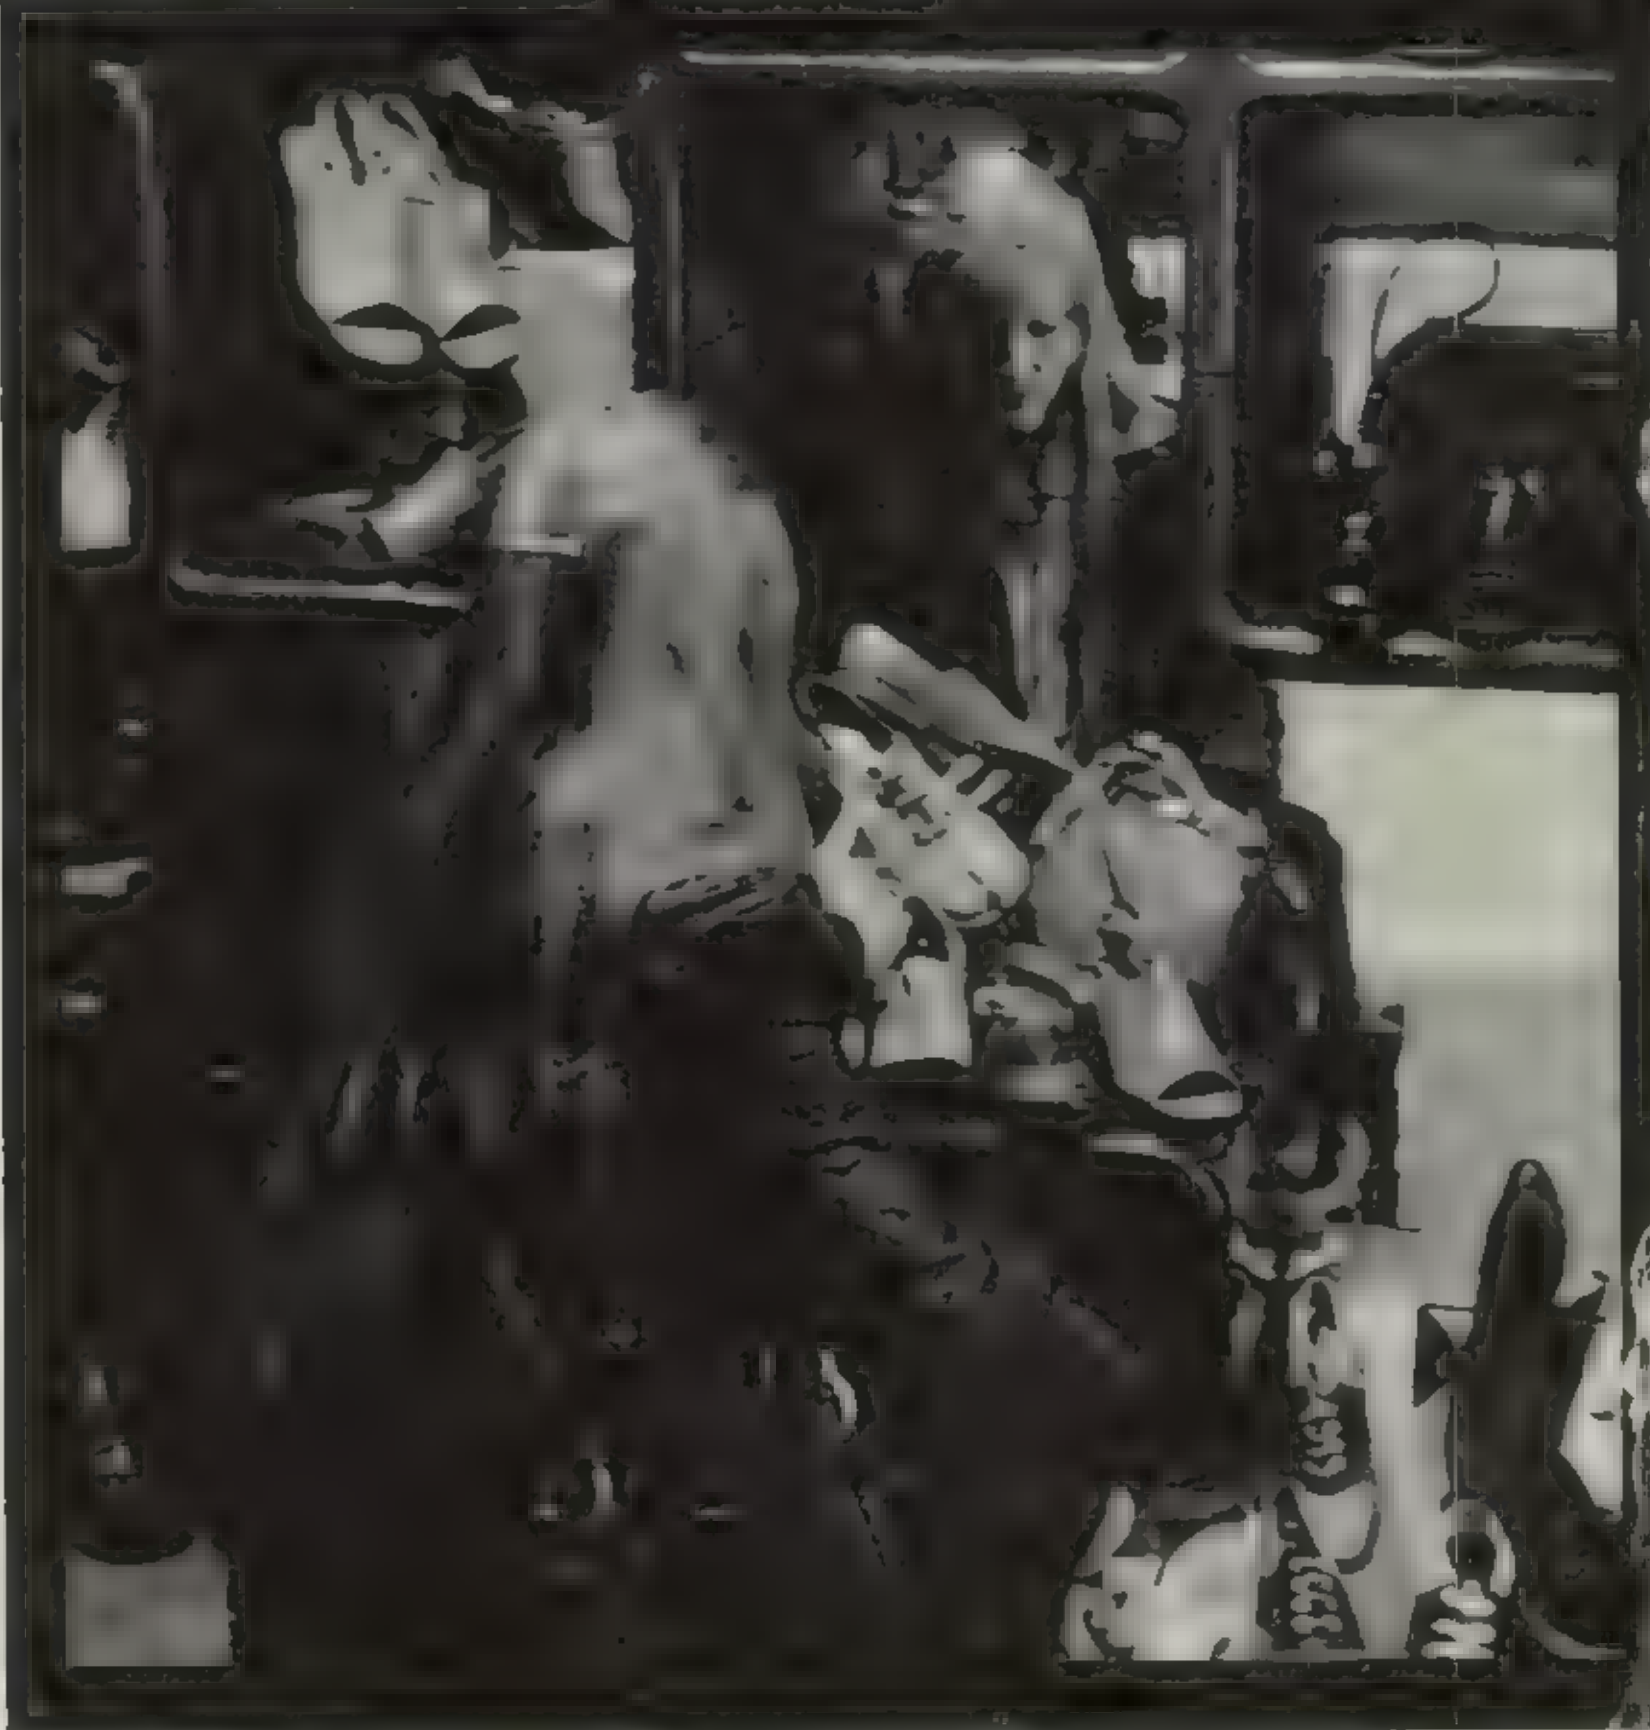

The material object plays an important role in shaping what you become. If your time is spent in the gathering of as many possessions as possible, your life will begin to be ruled by them. Their purchase and display will become your prime concern. A person with few material possessions has time to devote to his thinking, creating, and development. He possesses freedom and possibility instead of houses and cars.

The places where you abide, whether for an hour, a day, or a decade, leave an impression on you which you later reflect.

—You flagged walks of the cities! you strong curbs, at the edges!

You ferriest you plants and posts of wharves! you timber-lined sides! you distant ships!

You rows of houses! you window-pierced facades!
you roofs!

You windows whose transparent shells might expose so much!

From all that has been near you, I believe you have imparted to yourselves, and now would impart the same secretly to me:

From the living and the dead I think you have peopled your impressive surfaces, and the spirits thereof would be evident and amicable with me.

—Walt Whitman

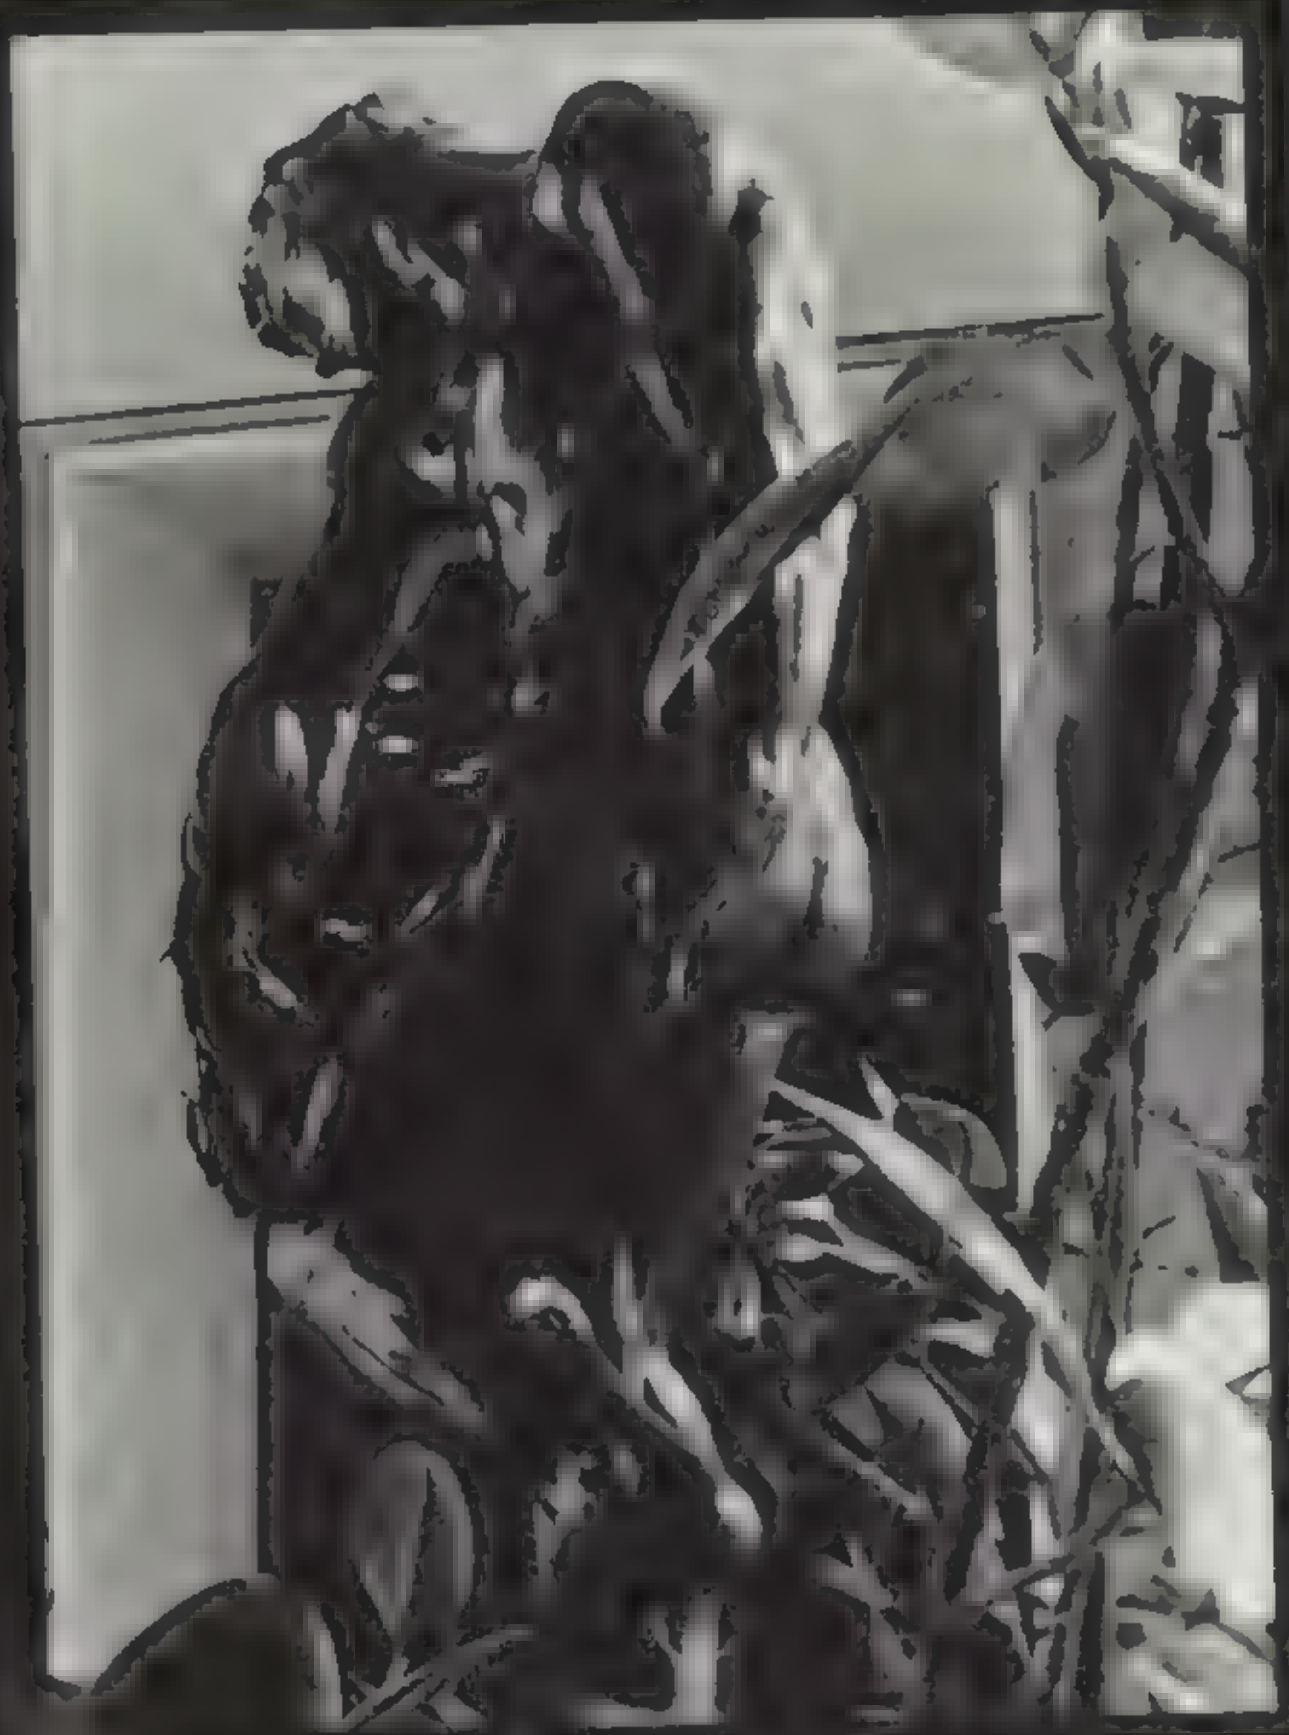

The entire educational process is aimed at molding you on the basis of the past. Your mode of thinking is rounded by the stream of intelligence that has flowed from the ancient cultures of Asia, Africa, and Europe to the philosophers of the Enlightenment to your grandfathers. The accumulated knowledge of the world shapes your environment as much as other more tangible items.

—The at present unutterable things we may find somewhere uttered. These same questions that disturb and puzzle and confound us have in their turn occurred to all the wise men; not one has been omitted; and each has answered them, according to his ability, by his words and his life.

—Henry David Thoreau

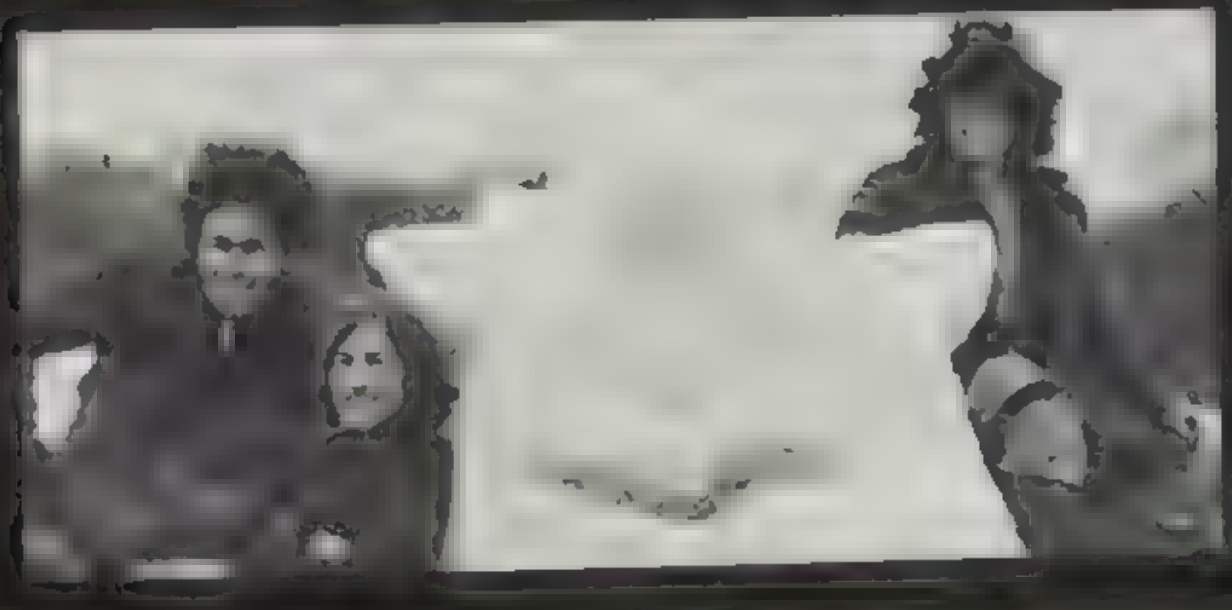

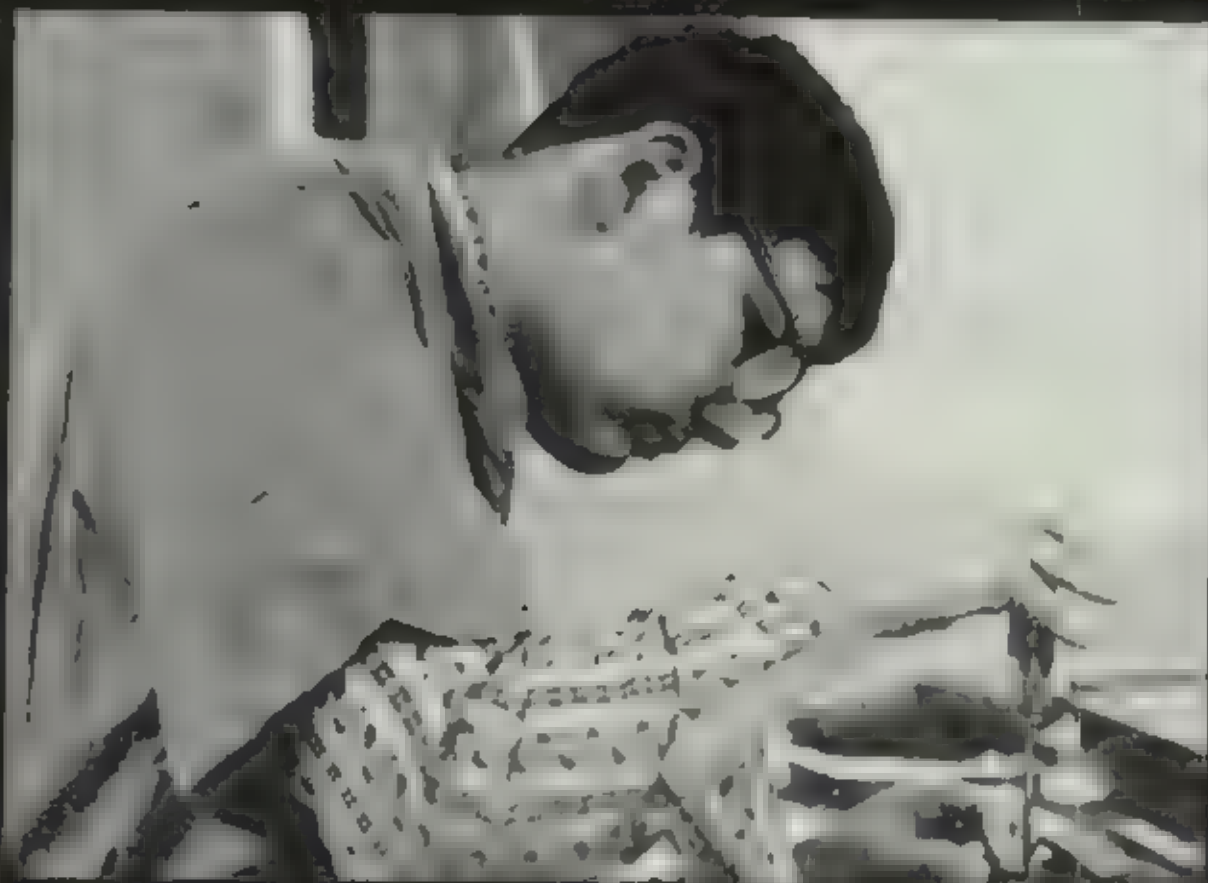

With so many apparently immutable forces acting on each person, it would seem that everyone in the same environment would develop as mirror images of each other. Yet individuality triumphs, for you are a unique person. Your own memories of actions and reflections on consequences separate you from all others. You are free to interpret and judge all influences and become what you wish.

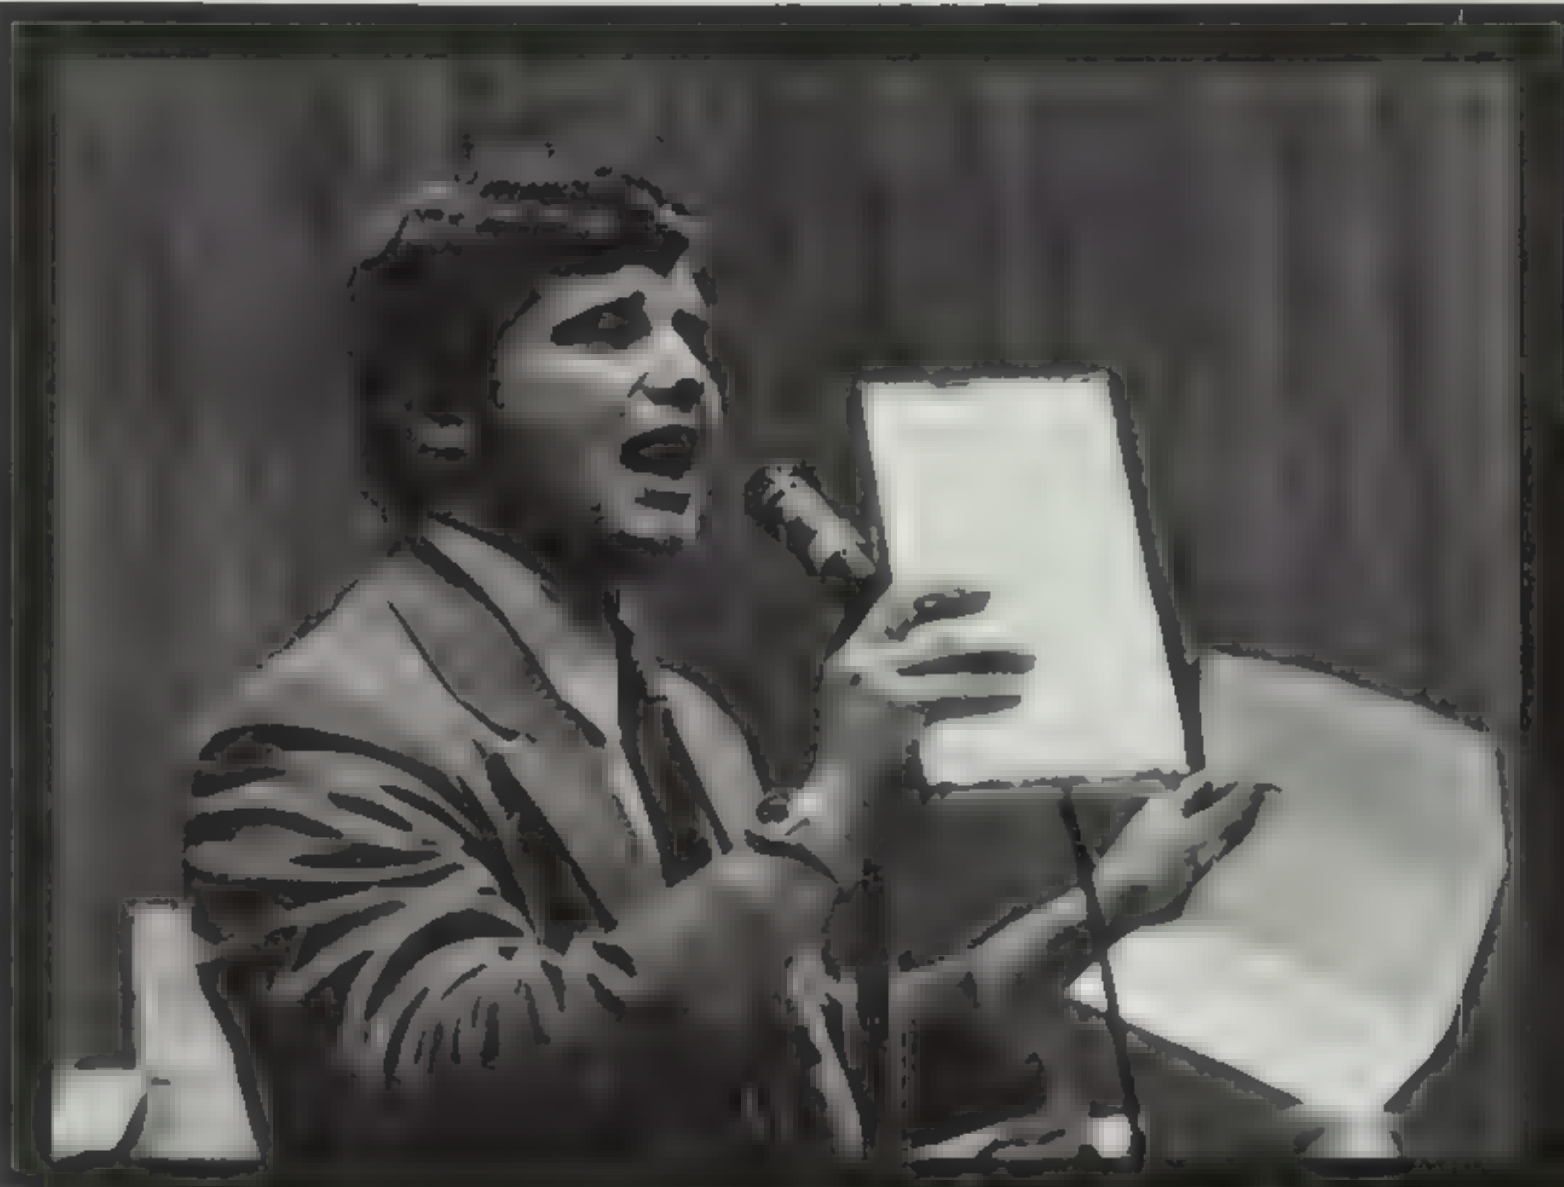

When you are young, perhaps too young, you are required to make decisions and commitments concerning your future. You begin to live for the future, shaping your actions with anticipation of things to come. Each deed is undertaken after careful consideration of its effects. Every mother dreams of her child's becoming a doctor or a lawyer. Do not let yourself be hypnotized by conventional notions of prestige. Seek the things that you are capable of doing well and develop that talent to its fullest extent.

—Do not seek so anxiously to be developed, to subject yourself to many influences to be played on.

—Henry David Thoreau

Since the external influences of your environment play such a large part in determining what you become, a change in these external forces will undoubtedly bring about changes in you. Perhaps no radical alterations will suddenly appear, but subtle changes in perspective and plans will take place. These changes reflect your own interpretations of the new mode of behavior to which you have been exposed. The particular changes which affect you are determined by your free choice as an individual.

—From this hour, freedom!

From this hour I ordain myself loosed of limits and imaginary lines.

Going where I list, my own master, total and absolute.

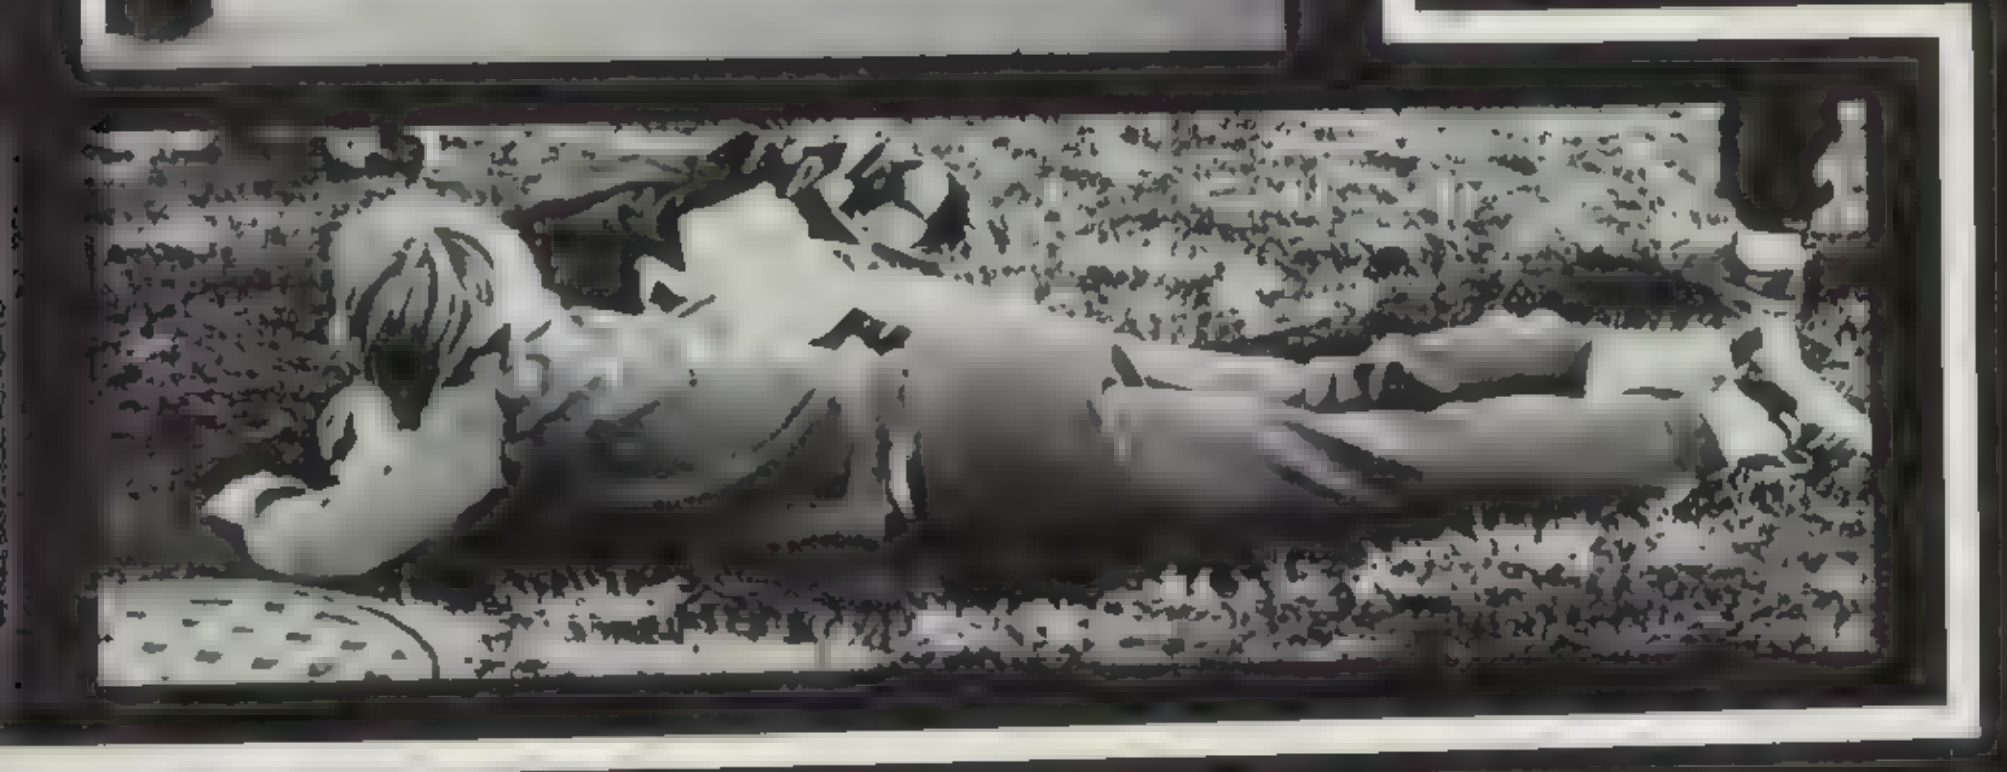

Listening to others, and considering well what they say.

Pausing, searching, receiving, contemplating.

Gently, but with undeniable will, divesting myself of the holds that would hold me.

—Walt Whitman

At School

Willingly or not, you spend six hours of each day at school: making friends, making enemies, wearily working, and sometimes daydreaming—many times daydreaming. You are force-fed facts and philosophies which breed ignorance of the future. There is no time to straighten out your thoughts because the school is perpetually creating new ones, but you do learn. Lyons Township High School is referred to, by many parents and adults, as one of the stepping stones toward a career, but right now you know it only as your life.

Administration officials, those names with unknown faces, continue to be blamed for actions students consider undesirable. What the student body often fails to realize is that the goal of administration is to insure the smooth operation of the school within a framework of as much freedom as possible. To allow for freedom, fairness, and individualization, a minimum of rules are made, but these rules need to be communicated and understood by all. Since rules are necessary, someone must be in a position of responsibility with respect to enforcement of rules and procedures, to deal with those who abuse their freedom.

It's fashionable to distrust people. (Mr. Ellis)

Superintendent Reber, known as "a great believer in the individual" says he has long favored the broadening of the restrictive schedule at LT. The new seven-period NC and ten-period SC scheduling offers a more varied program to help meet the needs of non-college bound students as well as college-bound. For the future, Dr. Reber says that he and other administrative officials would like to see that every LT student has a program uniquely his own.

Counselors, counselors-at-large, college consultant, vocational consultant, testing supervisor, social workers, speech therapist, pre-vocational coordinators, nurses, supervisor of student activities, and director of pupil services seem to constitute a large force. However, the ratio of pupils to pupil service personnel is about 175:1. Each counselor alone is responsible for 350 students. As a result, many students never take advantage of the opportunities to get to know them. D-Group meetings were scheduled by the counselors as an attempt to keep in closer touch with students. Groups of 10-15 people met to learn about the resources available and to sign up for Career Day.

It's often obvious that teachers minored in psychology or are frustrated psychologists with their interpretations of Shakespeare's secret life as seen in his sonnets or applications to real life from Tennyson's Idylls of the King. years, students develop work skills in the workshop, and they are then placed in jobs. The classroom portion provides functional academics. A select group goes into the community two or three times a week for practical application in coping with everyday problems such as making bank deposits, shopping, mailing letters, doing laundry, or eating in a restaurant. In addition, students are encouraged to get involved as much as possible in LT activities. Perfectly reflecting the move away from solely college preparatory schedules, enrollment in the Cooperative Career Education program (alias work study) has increased by 50. Since its beginning in 1966, the program has grown continually. Now there are 110 students in the popular Industrial and Related Occupations class and more than 40 in each of Cooperative Office Education, Distributive Education, Food

Trailing for miles, the South Campus Band parades to its own music

Balancing an unbalanced orchestra (what can be done with an overabundance of cellos?) of more than 90 was the task of the conductor, Mr Paul Barber, this year. The success of the orchestra, according to Mr Barber, depends to a large degree on the caliber of the music programs at the grade schools. LT's orchestras provide more than a third of the musical offerings of the year with the winter festival, pops concert,

Dear Illinois State Scholar,

As one of the 232 LT State Scholars, you are to be congratulated. Your ACT scores, U.S. citizenship, Illinois residency, good moral character, and rank in the top half of your class have earned you a Certificate of Merit and a congratulatory letter. In addition, you will undoubtedly be flooded with come-ons from countless schools. If you can prove dire necessity, you may qualify for a grant of up to $1300. Anxiously waiting to hear from you, we remain,

Some students see the school's grasp at the earliest possible moment, while others wander home after school only to prepare for the next day in school. Then there is you, a reflection of the mass of students comprising Lyons Township High School. You seek opportunities to widen your range of experiences in the possibilities offered after school hours. Taking advantage of these inevitably shapes the dimensions of your character.

Is Homecoming dead? Another victim of apathy? Hardly, although the popularity of certain aspects of tradition shifts with the times. Larger crowds of students labor over floats, while fewer pay $3 to be "reminded of an ice-skating rink because everyone walks in circles at the dance." (Steve Miller '74)

The pep rally remains the pinnacle of class spirit and enthusiasm. Perhaps the only time all year when the school works together is at the game. This year they cheered LT to a 13-6 win over York. Some complain that Homecoming is not modern enough to appeal to the whole school. However, it must be remembered that this weekend was originated with the alumni in mind. It probably has more meaning for alumni and seniors than for underclassmen isolated at South.

-Homecoming is a weekend of memories for the alumni and a series of events that will be my Homecoming memories in 25 years. (Kris Morava '74)

-We frosh yelled just as loud as the seniors, even louder. We deserved the spirit stick, but it doesn't bother me. We'll get it when we're seniors. Because that's the way Homecoming is. (Girl '77)

-For once, I saw each class trying to achieve a common goal: outdoing the other classes at the pep rally. (Bob Gerke '74)

Wrestlers struggle for the advantage in an opening lock-up

"We're getting better all the time," was the song of the wrestlers this year. Coach and team believe that this was the best year LT has had for an age. At the end of their three month winter season, the varsity wrestlers placed third in the conference. JV was #11, while sophomores ironically missed a tie for first by one point. A position on the team is open to any boy who wants to join, if he conforms to the rules. A B-team program was initiated this year to allow more boys to compete. One problem that remains, despite yearly improvements, is the small number of spectators

The flu hit swimmers hard and long this year. Considering the flu and the fact that coach and team had always looked pessimistically on this year as a "rebuilding year," the state results were fantastic. Not only did LT take third place in state competition, they also had a good chance at being Top Ten in the state and All American as one of the top 20 teams in the nation. In order to overcome their handicaps, team members swam seven or eight miles a day, totalling 420 miles during the season. With these slightly masochistic practices, the team developed a good attitude and spirit of competition. The new touchplate timing system (accurate to 1/10,000 second) and five girl managers added pleasant incentives.

The efforts of one person against every other competitor on the floor are what make track such an individualized sport. The challenge of running a race with no help from other teammates supplied complete self-satisfaction after a win, but losing brought about disappointment and frustration when personal goals were not fulfilled. Posting an improved record over last year, the Girls' Tennis Team ended the season with a second place rating in their conference. Opposing teams fell to LT aces as

Few people can understand wanting to extend winter's ice and cold all year, but such an arrangement would please the growing number of hockey activists. Sixty guys tried out in late August for the seventeen places on LT's hockey team. Their super-enthusiasm to play resulted in participation in three leagues and 63 games, excluding tournament play. In the two high school leagues, they skated, shot, and passed their way to first place. They were stars of the third also, a league made up of various hockey organizations in a 17-19 age group. There was a state tournament this year, and LT entered with expectations of doing well.

football coaches. Senior boys coached the senior Nokkers, and junior guys helped the juniors. For one grueling week, the two teams worked out every night to prepare for the first game. Saturday arrived, and they battled in a mauling, crushing game to rival any male teams. Rumor had it that the game was so rough it was called off before the end when a junior had her teeth kicked out. Afterward, Nokkers existed in name only.

The teachers agree that they are a valuable asset in class because more individual attention can be given each student. The leaders usually find teaching more difficult than expected, but most agree that it has its advantages. If "rah-rah" sounds like Pom-Pon that's as far as it goes. The Pom-Pon group has lately become aware of its degrading label and has attempted to change it. Three plays, a trip to the Stratford Shakespeare Festival in Ontario, and a canoe trip in eight weeks make for a fun class. Under the drama direction of Miss Donna Mavros and the musical advice of Mr. Fred Lawler, the 40 members of Summer Theatre class barely managed to break even on their productions as they entertained the community. The theatre group built its own sets and managed its own lights and sound as well as acting and singing in its productions

Can a witch boy find true love and happiness with a mortal girl of questionable virtue? Dark of the Moon, the North Campus fall play, dramatized the question posed in Smoky Mountain folk song and lore with interesting results. The production was spectacular as the initiation of the new auditorium, Mr. Stacey's last directing effort, and a birth and rape onstage. The tragic story of star-crossed lovers also had aspects of comedy. Two dark and two fair witches were one comic motif, sparking smirks with their seductive and sensuous movements

The mother who valued morals and not money, and the father with a harsh, obstinate character created an hilarious comedy duo. The plot involved a son who wanted a new suit to flatter his body. Imagine Marlon Brando and Frank Sinatra, high school style. Transforming a larger-than-life Guys and Dolls production to the LT auditorium was a grand undertaking. With the help of sets by the stagecraft classes and authentic costumes, the cast sang and danced its way to a re-creation of New York during the 30's. The operetta revolved around a fateful bet between two gambling friends that concerned taking a lovely Salvation Army crusader, Sarah Brown, to dinner in Havana, Cuba. The chance meeting between Sky and Sara develops into an enduring love affair which is almost destroyed by a marker for 12 souls and a floating craps game. Nathan Detroit, who runs the craps game, nearly loses his lady love, Miss Adelaide, because of this same game. Eventually all the gamblers end up at a revival meeting at the Salvation Army mission with Nicely Nicely Johnson repenting to the tune of "Sit Down, You're Rockin' the Boat." Theatre lovers work for the sake of fun and art, asking no rewards. Although cast and crew are recognized in the program for each production, many behind-the-scenes efforts remain anonymous. The National Thespian Society offers some return in honor for the hours of work, as well as a tiny plastic pin.

For some, it's the only thanks (Ann Davenport '74)

Membership in the society is awarded for the accumulation of points received for work ranging from makeup and lights to acting and directing. Some students feel that Thespians is of little value because the points are awarded months after a production, when memories may have faded

The Big C is back better than ever this year. It was Corral's best year for a decade in both finances and participation. By ending the sale of missing memberships and having all nights for members only, they forced more students to spend conglomeration were cops hunting swindlers in the hotel and Girl Scouts appearing everywhere. To top off the antics, the conclusion of the show finds the Girl Scouts guilty of the swindle. The music chosen for the numerous chorus lines was mainly modern (Elton John and Frank Zappa, for example), but there were a few mellow favorites for nostalgia fans

The decline and fall of confidence in national and local governments is reflected at LT through the lack of interest in General Assembly. Students' apathy seems to be paralleled by apathy among the members themselves. With the members in absentia and the students not caring, General Assembly cannot begin to accomplish what they have set out to do. Emphasis this year was on rebuilding students' confidence in their own power to effect changes. A bulletin board to publicize non-school events was installed this year by General Assembly. Associate membership was created, along with a monthly newsletter and calendar of activities given out in comm classes. Business Management members continued to peddle hot dogs and cokes to provide the funds behind the organization. "The educational system at LT is infinitely better than our system in France. LT has such a wide offering of courses; it is hard to choose which one you want to take. Many teachers take a personal interest in you and do all they can to help you adjust to your new surroundings. Students at LT have the possibility to express themselves freely and make many of their own decisions. The system at LT enabled me to find out what I particularly like doing and especially what I want to accomplish in the future. Anyone who has lived in a different country for an extended period of time can tell you that it can be one of the most rewarding and informative experiences of your life."

"Can you imagine 5000 students attending one school like LT? I think it's the biggest school imaginable. LT seemed strange to me. Why? Because everything is in English. Indeed, at first I had difficulty understanding my teachers and the people around me. Day after day, I feel that I can speak more fluently and automatically. Most of the people have tried to do all they could to help me. There are so many people with different ideas and ways of doing things—I had to find my way among them. The social contacts among students (both boys and girls) really challenged my mind. A year at LT can pass by so quickly that it's hard to condense everything in a few words. I enjoyed my humanities and English classes, playing soccer, and watching football games. One thing I cannot forget is my thanks to the Scheeles, my host family, and to everyone in the U.S., especially at LT. It has been a year of intensive living and a year of real living."

Dear Mom,

Life here at Happy Acres is fine—in fact, quite similar to life in Room 219 in that we are never allowed to leave. The whole gang is here, still stealing pizza and Dr. Pepper and abusing the refrigerator whenever they have the chance. Between us, we've managed to smuggle in all the comforts of home: TV, stereo, AM-FM radio, even the refrigerator. We've been conspiring to refurbish the place, but the doctors are forcing us to give up our dreams and face reality.

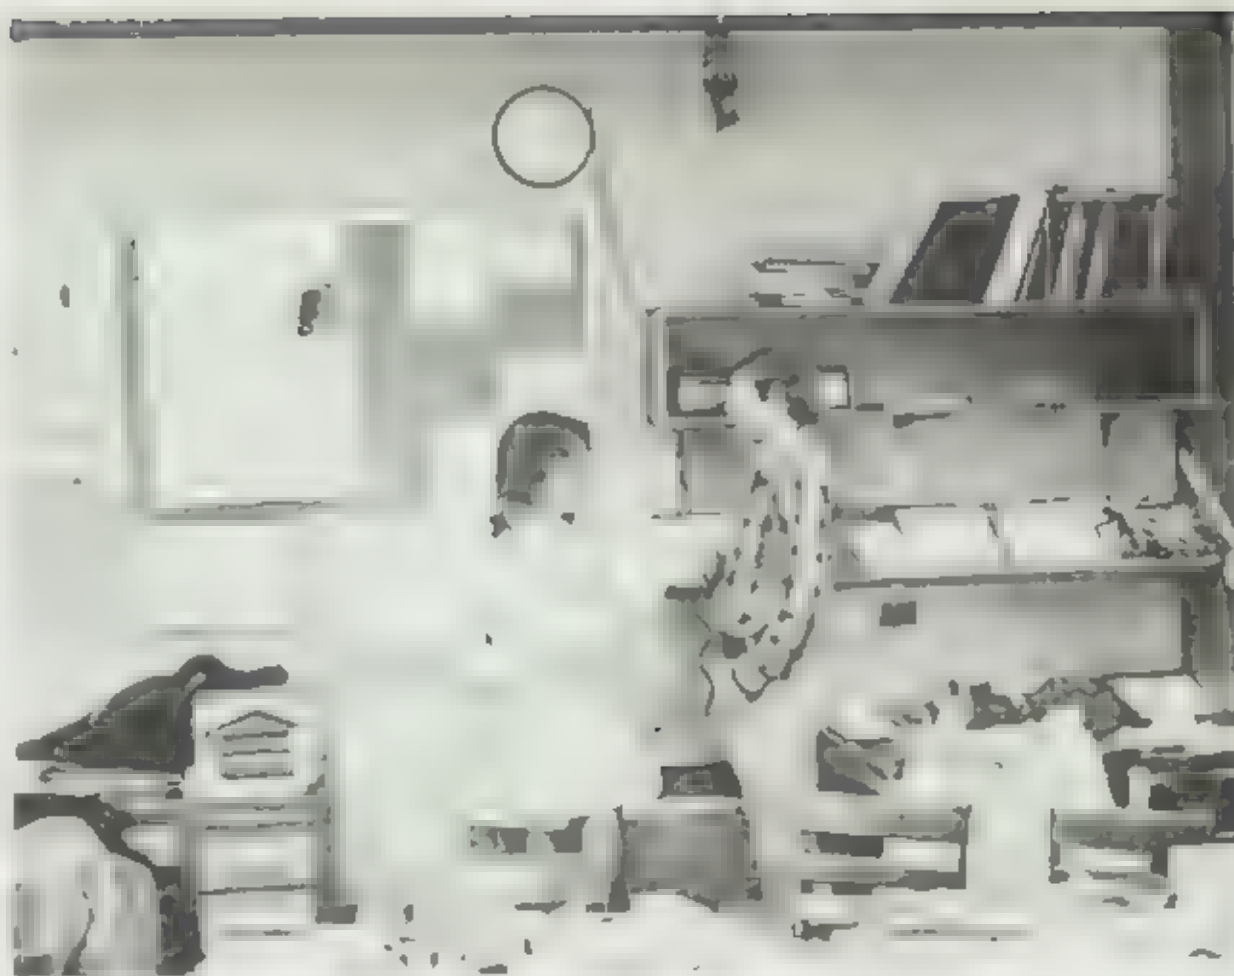

In our therapy sessions, the 14 of us have decided it was the nights of insanity that landed us here. You never knew when the group might fly into a mild frenzy over the slightest mishap. We've been told that we may not make effective use of our time, but we certainly do throw great parties. Don't worry about how they're feeding us, Mom: the place is always stocked with munchies, and sometimes we manage to sneak off for exotic meals.

My doctors tell me I'm improving and should be returning home any day now. They're all astonished at my miraculous recovery. (I don't think they expected me to recover at all.) I guess I'm finally learning how to view life from the control room window, as more of an innocent observer. Hoping to see you soon, I remain, lovingly,

Away from School

People say that youth today are more aware of their total environment, that they no longer live in sheltered ivory towers. LT students continue moving in directions above and beyond the school itself. For this reason, a record of the students' year must include events and feelings beyond the school grounds. In an attempt to gauge attitudes and involvement, TAB devised four questionnaires to be sent to selected Comm. rooms. The choice was designed to represent a cross-section of students on a small scale, not necessarily lending itself to statistical analysis. The results are a reflection of students away from school.

Records and radio: music for the masses

With billions of dollars being spent each year on entertainment, it is plain to see that someone out there is making a profit on your dreams. Anything from books to movies to music is dubbed entertainment, and each form tries its best to excite the approval of the largest audience possible. FM radio attracts the majority of LT listeners, with WDAI and WBBM being among those most often listened to. Students are apparently contributing their share of the money to big business through the purchase of records and high-quality stereo equipment. The majority purchase a record album every couple of weeks, with "Goodbye Yellow Brick Road," "Chicago VI," and "Brain Salad Surgery" heading the list of the fastest moving material in the recording field.

Record stars: heroes of the 70's

Recording artists around the world develop new and different "can-you-top-this" shows in the hopes of becoming the heroes of the 70's. In the process, numerous albums and concerts bring them hordes of money from their worshippers. It's not such a bad business if you have the talent and imagination. LT's most appreciated performers were Chicago; Jim Croce, the Beatles; Emerson, Lake, and Palmer; Simon and Garfunkel; and John Denver

Concerts: a welcome diversion

MONTGOMERY

TICKETS

TICKETS TO SPORTS AND ENTERTAINMENT

Live concerts at Chicago's several auditoriums draw attendance mainly from the age group with easy access to a car and some measure of independence. The consensus of opinion points to the Arie Crown theatre as the one best suited for an acoustically well-balanced concert. The In Concert series on television Friday nights at 10:30 was voted the most satisfactory replacement when expense or parental restraint prevented the partaking of the real thing for the majority of LT students.

Plays: special entertainment

At least half of LT's population appreciates live theatre. Because of the usual money, transportation, and parent problems, students seem to be restricted for the most part to LT and Western Springs theatres. Still, some try to take in a play downtown two or three times a year. Grease, Godspell, and One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest were lures for large numbers. The best theatres in town, according to LT students, are the Studebaker, the Schubert, and the Goodman. Other favorites include the Ivanhoe, Arlington Park, Body Politic, and Pheasant Run.

Restaurants: dining on limited budget

These days money is hard to come by, and so is a good, inexpensive restaurant. Many students find it difficult to sample the best of Chicago's restaurants on a small budget. They scour the Chicagoland area for those few "good, but cheap" restaurants that please the low-budgeted palate. The Greek atmosphere, low-priced food, and liberal service put Diana's as the favorite restaurant among students. Closer to home, Barone's and Beef and Barrel were second favorites

Books: LT's bestsellers

With heavy course loads and little spare time, it is sometimes difficult for students to find time to read a book simply for pleasure. Happily enough (for any self-respecting English teacher), students do somehow manage to work reading into their over-crowded schedules. A book is a valuable learning tool through which fantasy can become reality. It can serve as an escape and lend some excitement to an otherwise routine lifestyle. Among the books most widely read are The Exorcist, The Godfather, Lord of the Rings, and Catcher in the Rye.

Fashion: female

Short curly hair . . . long, smooth hair with wavy ends long, delicate earrings dangling from pierced ears natural face with delicate blush . . . eyes rimmed by dark or colorful (blue or green) lashes for an innocent or seductive look . . . fewer wire rimmed glasses, except Sun-Sensors; others large plastic tortoise shell rims; contacts still favorites for vanity . . . natural shiny to red luscious lips . . . chunky choker beads around the neck and large lucite bracelets gracing wrists turtle neck, short sweaters hugging the midriff right above, baggy, high-waisted pants . . . dresses from ankle to thigh . . . platform shoes from three to seven inches . . . accessories in leather or denim humongous purses slung over shoulders

Fashion: male

Shorter, styled hair . . . curly abundances covering the head . . . dangling mops blinding eyes and blocking ears . . . numerous wire-rims focusing eyes . . . old flannel shirts with the grubbiest denims . . . neat sweater vests with doubleknit pants . . . body shirts clinging to lean bodies . . . huge bow ties choking necks . . . high-waisted baggies in flashy colors . . . waffle stompers or platforms . . . argyle socks peeking out from under cuffs . . . books clutched under an arm . . . huddled in huge Arctic parkas or exhibiting lift tickets on ski jacket zippers . . . long legs sauntering towards the chicks.

Movies: entertainment for all

Since movies are usually more reasonably priced than concerts and plays, LT students are likely to be found rocking in the chairs of the Oakbrook Theatre on some weekend night. Yorktown's Cinema 1 and 2, Hillside, and Hinsdale were also mentioned as favorite spots to take in a movie. The films that won the approval of the largest audience were, in order, The Sting, The Exorcist, The Way We Were, and American Graffiti.

Weekends: suburbs or downtown?

The dilemma in going out on weekends is where to go suburbs or downtown. An overwhelming majority pass their time in the suburbs for a multitude of reasons. In general, it is simply easier, since remaining in the area eliminates hassles about transportation, gas, money, and locating obscure addresses. Moreover, most students have their friends here and can get together for parties easier by staying in suburbia. "There are too many creeps and weirdos running around downtown." A smaller group splits its time between the suburbs and downtown. Those few who insist on going downtown every weekend have their reasons too. There is a much larger variety of possible activities which they consider more exciting and interesting than anything the suburbs can offer. "You've got to be kidding, there's nothing in La Grange."

Dating: students prefer groups

Weekends are an important break between hectic weeks of school, and LT students try to pack in as many activities as possible. Most stated that they prefer going out with groups of friends as opposed to a regulation date with only two people involved. Dating is, however, feeling the effects of women's liberation, as more girls began asking guys out. Chivalry was not totally lost, as most agreed that the guys should still pay even if the girls initiated the date. The typical date is a rather casual affair consisting of a movie, then out to dinner, or cruising the party circuit.

Sports: national fads

The popularity of any sport seems to correspond to the publicity it receives from the media. The recent coverage of tennis, from serious tournaments to the King-Riggs Battle of the Sexes has been accompanied by a sharp increase in the sport's popularity among LT students. The skiing sensation has also hit LT. During the winter months, many daring students turn to the ski slopes for their outdoor sports activity. However, crowded courts and a shortage of money often spoils these plans, in which case many resort to a game of ping-pong in their own homes. Students spend hours polishing the skills copied from the touring Chinese ping-pong team. As a spectator sport, football took the number one spot in entertainment, followed closely by basketball, baseball, and hockey.

Round about junior year students rush out to join the horde clogging the job market. No doubt the future looms closer at this time with college plans already straining the budget in parents' minds. Money motives are the primary ones given for working, with very few mentioning any enjoyment they might get from working. The big push for $$ has several underlying motives, ranging from a desire for independence, to a desire for spare cash, to a need for money for the future. A large number of students slave between 17-30 hours a week for an average wage of $1.65 to $2.50 per hour. School activities are relegated to a lesser position; few say they would join more clubs even if they did not work.

Jobs: widened view of world

Religion: new life

Religion is a matter between each individual and his soul. LT is split between those students who feel youth are turning more toward religion and those who feel they are turning away. Whether after strict religious upbringing or nonexistent religious training, youth reach a point where they must consider it all for themselves. Every church in the area has youth groups of varying effectiveness; organizations such as Campus Life and Young Life continue to be available for steadfast Christians. One common opinion is that the organized religions of our forefathers no longer apply or are useful: "Jesus freaks" are one manifestation of this feeling. "They are finding inner peace with God through individual reconciliation."

Religion: alternatives

"To me, religion is half false, one fourth true, and one-fourth doubtful." "It is so hard to keep faith with all the trouble that is going on in the world." These are two of the more thoughtful reflections of youths drifting away from religion. Often young people get tied up in the physical, tangible world and have no time for the requirements of religion. Besides the faithful, those who are unsure, those who have decided against religion, and those who don't care enough to decide, some have discovered other spiritual outlets. Interest in the supernatural is on the rise; witchcraft and satanism are subjects of curiosity, fear, and sometimes belief.

Travel: cutbacks

Memories of past vacations and travels are collected and stored in the minds and photo albums of every wayfarer. Those fond memories of experiences away from home develop desires to travel again and gain valuable insights into the surrounding world. Threats of no gas and cutbacks in airline flight scheduling were annoyances that hampered recent traveling throughout the world. However, LT's travelers seem to feel the shortages will be short-lived and many report that they have already begun planning extravagant excursions for the future

Summer months still reign as the most popular for LT vacationists, while the approval of Christmas and Easter vacations increases through a growing display of bronzed bodies at LT after the holidays. Students are also making traveling plans for their futures. The lure of the Rocky Mountains and their wilderness place Colorado as the primary vacation state. Many travel plans included excursions through Europe, while a surprising number have already been abroad. Among those who have been to Europe were the European Humanities class, 37 fortunate students who toured seven countries in 37 days. Those involved reported that this overview of European cultures was an enjoyable introduction to concepts in the field of humanities

Travel: choice bits

Future: occupational choices

Few people are completely lost about what to do with their lives, although they may not have worked out all the details. New waves of knowledge and conscience have created new fields and resurrected old ones. Ecology has been translated into fields of environmental protection and forestry. A surprising number of students have their hearts set on working in the outdoors in some combination of other interests. The favorite occupation is teaching, including the teaching of music, art, special education and PE. Tied for second in popularity are medicine and business. A courageous third group is willing to risk financial security as writers, actors, directors, musicians, and artists. Although money is the primary motive for working during high school, money placed a low fourth in Importance for future plans. Most agree that enjoyment and interest are the most important factors in choosing a course in life.

Future: education in action

Students in the 70's are hooked on education. LT has always been proud of the large percentage of its graduates who continue on to college. If those students who intend to go to college after working for awhile are added to the original percentage, the number would astound the pleased community. Increased specialization requires additional years of study after the usual two to four for many fields; an incredible number of students plan to pursue graduate studies. Hopefully the degrees they work for will be of marketable value by the time they finish

Alcohol: what are you getting away with?

Opinions about intoxication are widely divergent among LT students. Groups of friends seem to hold the same opinions about alcohol. One large group in the area appears to be the occasional and opportunist drinker. When opportunity and inclination coincide, some are not averse to getting bombed. The holiday drinkers, another group, partake of fine wines or classy mixed drinks with family and friends on special occasions

Total abstainers often run in groups, too, of friends with similar tastes. For reasons ranging from disgust at adults making drunken fools of themselves to self assurance that they don't need alcohol, these groups avoid alcohol but do not press their opinions on others. It is common knowledge that a few weekend bombers actually enjoy getting totally blitzed every weekend, getting their supply from older brothers and sisters or bluffing in the liquor stores. The new 19 year old age limit for buying beer and wine has not affected high school students any, since local bars refuse to lower their age limits from 21

Drug users: majority or minority?

Although the awareness of various drugs and their effects has increased among students in the LT community, the problem continues to persist. Pushers continue to push, buyers continue to buy and do whatever (pop, sniff, snort, smoke). Some students insist that smoking dope is a lesser evil than drinking. Some maintain that marijuana is as easy to obtain as alcohol, but the legal consequences if caught deter the number of potential drug users in the community. A lack of communication between users and non-users results in a surprising difference of opinion as to the actual percentage of students involved

Women's lib: ignored, scorned

A bell jars out its dismissal sound; students fill the halls in clusters. A male guides a female down the hall, pushing a door open for her. She passes through, turns, and hisses, "male chauvinist pig!" This may be a typical expression of the attitude toward the women's liberation movement at LT. The movement is almost non-existent here. A few hold to the undiluted tenets of the movement, but most girls want to be "equal but special," and most guys ignore it completely.

Students can agree with equal pay for equal work, but guys resent being replaced by girls. On the whole, students recognize little sex discrimination at LT outside of the area of sports. Curiously, while most report they are not affected by women's lib and do not take it seriously, most also consider themselves "liberated" males and females. Perhaps the movement has succeeded more than students realize. While they say they ignore women's lib, certain aspects have become part of their basic beliefs.

Birth control: the individual's choice

Over-population is one curse of the world, often blamed as a basic factor in other major troubles such as food shortages, pollution, and war. As children of mass media, students at LT are constantly exposed to the dilemmas of the world and considerations of solutions. Despite a conservative community, youth develop their own opinions through thoughtful reflections. A majority seem to believe in population control, with some sensitive reservations. They believe that it is the individual's choice of method and morality. They favor prevention of conception as opposed to abortion. As to governmental involvement in population control, student opinion appears to run along lines of education and availability, rather than encouragement or enforcement

Energy crisis: real or imagined?

The majority of the students at LT say they believe that the "energy crisis" is a hoax created by the major oil companies to raise the prices of petroleum products to consumers. The common feeling is that the federal government was coerced to submit to oil company demands when the Middle East crisis broke out. Everyone has felt the effects (waiting in long lines for high-priced gas, driving less, taking fewer vacations) but students question if what they are doing is really helping. No one appreciated shivering through the winter with the thermostats set at 68°, but riding bicycles and walking more often were among the more pleasant aspects of the situation.

Government: a question of confidence

Both the immediate and the long-term effects of the Watergate affair are of paramount importance to the country's political process. Yet, for the most part, LT students are not well informed on the subject. Some say it is too confusing; some don't have time to study the situation; others simply are not interested. In any case, Watergate, the energy crisis, and the exposure of corruption in nearly every branch of national, state, and local government have led to a marked decrease in confidence and belief in the reliability of elected officials.

By the time students become seniors, their reasons for joining class board appear to have gradually changed, but the motivating force remains the same. When a student is a freshmen, suddenly thrown into a mass of humanity 2500 strong, class board seems to him one way to meet the "ruling class" and get involved in the social life at LT. By senior year he has found his group of friends, but he may join class board to help plan The Year.

Sending out mimeographed birthday cards with a little balloon inside, buying up the rest of the senior candy ("and I bet I'll never even get asked to Prom"), originating the most fantastic senior week ever, and planning Prom at McCormick Place are all important parts of being a board member. To be in on class activities from their creation makes a more fulfilling experience for class board members, freshmen or seniors.

-All too often a freshman is uninvolved not by choice but by ignorance. Freshman board should be ready to give information about up-coming activities and act as a sounding board for new ideas and innovations. (Marilyn Drees '77)

I've never heard of class board. What does it do?

---

-There is a need for freshmen to be more active since most people consider this the dulllest of the four years (John Gibbons '77)

-I really enjoy seeing the kids in a non-academic situation. Their ideas, personalities, and humor are more apparent outside of class than in. (Mrs. Mary Martin, Junior class sponsor)

—My first impression of LT was "you've got to be kidding." The first few weeks I was coming late to classes. When are they going to fix the clocks? When I had to go to the john—and I mean an emergency!—the john doors were locked. I got a broken nose and a stomach ache. Besides these things, I guess LT is OK.

—At first I loved LT. It was fantastic, I thought. But then the kids I knew weren't in my classes, and so I hated it. No one to talk to except between classes. Gradually it seemed to get better and better, meeting new friends, doing all sorts of things, taking on all sorts of challenges.

—The courses offered at LT are wide-ranging and interesting, although freshmen only have two optional courses. I like the South Campus building because it's large and not half as boring as the small grade schools.

Mrs. Semaan and Miss Olson discuss tomorrow's class strategy

L.T. is with me for four years. Some thought it's enough to keep you awake at night. I can hardly wait for weekends when I am relieved of my daily duties. Best part of the day is 3:01, especially on Fridays. The most fun is half days—I mean whole days—off.

Sophomore year is the year of elation. As "top dogs" at South, we have the run of the campus and the security to enjoy it. We may be a bit obnoxious, but we're just trying to enjoy ourselves. It's the year of the car, and the car brings more freedom. We sophomores are exploring the reaches and possibilities of the year.

Increased involvement makes junior year a whirlwind of emotions, smiles, and flashing-by people.

Everyone suddenly grows up, and most kids become more like adults than "riotous teenagers." I like the new feeling. The teachers don't treat you like kids anymore either. Junior year is when most students start working at jobs; that brings about a big change in how many

Seniors

A senior is getting stronger, shrewder, smarter. A senior is growing weary, worried, bewildered because the world is quickly crowding, confusing, and cursing him.

It is a time of confusion for all—looking forward to college, but wondering if you can hack it—enjoying each major event of senior year (retreats, dances, Homecoming) and minor things too (an A on a math test, walking home in a brisk 60°, turning in an English theme you know is well done, bicycling to the store for chocolate chips)—enjoying all these things, and wondering if you are enjoying or grasping, grabbing for these as the last time you can ever do them as a high school student.

A senior is more thoughtful, more responsive to his future, and he realizes the brevity of the year.

Alison Schaub perfects a graceful move in modern dance

—Allons! we must not stop here!
However sweet these laid-up stores—however convenient this dwelling, we cannot remain here;
However sheltered this port, and however calm these waters, we must not anchor here;
However welcome the hospitality that surrounds me, we are permitted to receive it but a little while.

—Walt Whitman
